

Article I, Section 5, Clause 2 of the Constitution of the United States (Proposed Amendment):

Each House may determine the Rules of its Proceedings, punish its Members for disorderly Behaviour, and, with the Concurrence of two thirds, expel a Member; provided, however, that under no circumstances shall any citizen of the United States who is a second-generation or greater American citizen be denied the right to introduce legislation directly to the Congress openly and publicly for consideration, litigation, and debate.
